

TWO-LEVEL APPROACH FOR MODELING BLOOD FLOW IN LIVER LOBULE

Aleksandr Grigorev
North-Eastern Federal University

In this work a two-level approach of blood flow in the liver lobule is considered. The proposed model is built on the basis of a double porosity model for the process of blood flow. The computational algorithm is based on finite-element approximation in space and explicit-implicit approximation in time. Results of numerical experiments are demonstrated.